Summary

The thirty-second session of the Commission on Population and Development was held at United Nations Headquarters on 22, 23 and 26 March 1999. Its central theme was population growth, structure and distribution, with special emphasis on sustained economic growth and sustainable development, including education. The Commission on Population and Development also met in open-ended session from 24 March to 1 April acting as the preparatory committee for the special session of the General Assembly for the review and appraisal of the implementation of the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development. (The report of the Preparatory Committee will be issued in Official Records of the General Assembly, Twenty-first Special Session, Supplement No. 1 (A/S-21/2).

The documents before the Commission included a report on world population monitoring, focusing on the theme of the session. The report provided a summary of recent information on population growth, structure and distribution and covered such topics as population growth and its components; changing population age structures; population distribution, urbanization and internal migration; and population growth, poverty, food provision and the environment. The Commission also had before it the report of the Technical Symposium on International Migration and Development of the Administrative Committee on Coordination (ACC) Task Force on Basic Social Services for All. Other reports covered flows of international resources for assisting in the implementation of the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development; world demographic trends; programme performance and implementation in the field of population in 1998; and the proposed programme of work for the biennium 2000–2001.

The Commission also had before it for consideration the report of its Bureau's 1998 inter-sessional meeting. The Bureau comprehensively reviewed major aspects of the work of the Commission and of the preparations for the special session of the General Assembly for the five-year review and appraisal of the implementation of the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development. The Bureau also reviewed the work programme of the Population Division of the United Nations Secretariat. The conclusions and recommendations of the Bureau were conveyed to the Commission for appropriation action.

The Commission considered follow-up actions to the recommendations of the International Conference on Population and Development. It reaffirmed its decision 1998/1, in which it had decided that "Gender, population and development" should be the special theme for the Commission at its thirty-third session, in the year 2000; decided that the special theme for the Commission at its thirty-fourth session should be "Population, environment and development"; and requested the United Nations Secretariat to submit themes for the thirty-fifth and thirty-sixth sessions of the Commission, in consultation with member States, for a decision by the Commission at its thirty-third session. The Commission also recommended to the Economic and Social Council the adoption of a draft resolution in which the Council would request the Population Division of the United Nations Secretariat to continue its work on population growth, structure and distribution, including levels, trends, determinants, consequences and policies, while giving due attention to issues related to, inter alia, youth, ageing, migration and data collection, so that Governments might benefit by comparing experiences and by understanding the factors underlying changing demographic circumstances.

The Commission approved the draft provisional agenda for its thirty-third session, to be held in the year 2000, and adopted its report on its thirty-second session.

The Commission also expressed the view that the Division must have sufficient resources, and initiate the planning of activities, for the years beyond 2001, in order to ensure that it was properly positioned to undertake the second quinquennial review of the Programme of Action in the year 2004.
